

Climate + Energy Voters Take Action is an initiative to ramp up climate action in Kansas, by educating Kansans about climate and energy issues that affect them and mobilize them to take action. It's part of an ongoing effort to build upon the statewide network of environmental advocacy groups and community leaders focused on climate and energy solutions to create and sustain a community of active, engaged voters.

During an election season, emphasis is on increasing voter turnout, especially among environmental voters who are underrepresented at the polls. During the 2020 election year, climate and energy voter ambassadors gained access to a tool called Voter to Voter, which simplified talking to friends and family about voting. Ambassadors also received training to improve voter turnout and take action on climate and energy issues in Kansas.
